What is Point of Care?

Point of Care Testing (POCT) refers to analytical patient testing activities provided within the institution, but performed outside the physical facilities of the clinical laboratory. Test results derived from POCT performed at the patient's bedside and/or in the clinic setting, may be used for screening, diagnosis of disease, and/or adjustment of therapy, depending on the physician's evaluation.

Availability of Point of Care testing varies by location and need.
